

Jeans. Colored Corsets of low grades are selling at a price as produced, although no decided advance has been made.

Several lots are pressing on the market, which precludes the idea of any advance, although we notice more demand.

The demand for Sultans and low Woollens has increased since our last report. The demand for Fancy Cassimere still continues, and Black Dressings of good style are selling well, but the general Woolen market is dull.

The importation of British Goods by Steamers Vigo and Ferns, as we anticipated, were large, and were principally orders for such styles as were most successful early in the season.

Our trade in Manchester continues good. We quote the private letter: "Our market for cotton has advanced full 1/2 of a penny. We have the most favorable accounts of the Manchester trade that have been received during the last eighteen years.

Spinnings have been sold at 14d. from 7 1/2d. count, and the expense of spinning is only 4d. Another says: "The consumption of cotton is enormous. The state of trade at Manchester is extraordinary. We never remember so flattering accounts for many years, if not all during our experience."

With this evidence before us, it seems probable that manufacturers cannot purchase cheap cotton for the years 1888 and '89, and if there is not a corresponding advance in heavy goods, many mills must discontinue production, or submit to heavy losses.
